Lancaster County Launches Strategic Arts Initiative and Countywide Economic & Community Arts Impact Study

Lancaster, PA (March 10, 2026) – The Foundation of the Lancaster Chamber, in partnership with the Ware Center for the Arts, community leaders and arts organizations across the county, has launched the Lancaster County Strategic Arts Initiative, a collaborative effort designed to better understand, strengthen, and invest in Lancaster County’s vibrant arts and culture sector.

As a first step in the initiative, the Foundation has engaged Fourth Economy, a nationally recognized community and economic development consulting firm, to conduct a countywide Economic & Community Impact Study of Lancaster County’s arts and culture ecosystem.

The study will provide a comprehensive analysis of the arts sector’s economic contributions, community impact, and future opportunities. The findings will help inform the development of a long-term strategic plan for the arts in Lancaster County, led by a community-based task force that will guide the initiative following completion of the study.

The last countywide arts impact study was conducted in 2010. Since that time, Lancaster County’s arts ecosystem has grown significantly, with expanded cultural institutions, creative businesses, festivals, educational programs, and individual artists contributing to the region’s economic vitality, civic identity, and quality of life.

“Lancaster County has become an extraordinary example of what can happen when a community believes in the power of the arts,” said John Gerdy, founder of Music For Everyone and a co-leader of the initiative. “The arts help shape who we are as a community. They strengthen our economy, enrich our schools, and bring people together in meaningful ways. This initiative gives us an opportunity to better understand that impact and to work collectively to ensure the arts continue to thrive across Lancaster County.”

Fourth Economy will conduct extensive community engagement throughout the study, including stakeholder interviews, surveys, and focus groups with artists, arts organizations, educators, businesses, and community leaders. The final report will analyze the sector’s economic and community impact while outlining strategic opportunities that can guide future investment and coordination.

Following completion of the study, a community-based Task Force will work together to review the findings and develop a long-term strategic plan for the arts in Lancaster County. Building on the study’s data and recommendations, the group will help identify priorities, strategies, and opportunities to strengthen the county’s creative ecosystem. The initiative will also support the formation of a Lancaster County Arts Alliance, a collaborative network designed to increase communication and partnership among artists, arts organizations, and community stakeholders. In addition, leaders will explore the development of an entity dedicated to advocating for the arts and coordinating efforts to ensure the long-term sustainability and growth of Lancaster County’s creative sector.

“This initiative is about ensuring that Lancaster County continues to be a place where the creative arts industry can thrive,” said Justin Johnson, Director of Communications at the Lancaster Chamber. “By gathering new data, listening to the voices of artists and organizations, and working collaboratively as a community, we can better understand the role the arts play in our economy and identify the strategies needed to support the sector for the future.”

To launch the initiative and begin the community conversation, organizers will host a public event on Wednesday, March 25, bringing together artists, cultural organizations, civic leaders, and community members interested in the future of the arts in Lancaster County.
